Historical Timeline of the University of Batangas

The following were the important dates in the history of the University of Batangas:

February 1945 As the Americans were advancing and hunting down the running Japanese, the latter started burning houses and killing the Batangueños they met. The towns of Bauan, Cuenca, Mataasnakahoy, San Jose, Santo Tomas, Taal, Tanauan and Lipa City were hard hit. The town of Batangas did not suffer much casualties due to the great efforts and sacrifices done by its town mayor, Roman L. Perez.

11 March 1945 Batangas was liberated. The people of Batangas started to work together in order to rebuild the town.

1946 The idea of putting up a school took shape at the printing press of Mr. Juan Y. Javier on P. Burgos Street. His meeting with Atty. Jesus L. Arguelles resulted to coming up with an idea of establishing a school that will benefit the young people of Batangas. These two, together with Atty. Francisco G. Perez, Mayor Roman L. Perez, Rev. Fr. Vicente Catapang, Ph.D., and Atty. Pablo Umali worked together in order to lay the foundation of the Western Philippine Colleges, now the University of Batangas.

28 April 1947 The first classes were formally conducted with 48 college and high school enrollees.

22 May 1947 The board called for a meeting in order to actualize the Important and functions of the Board of Trustees. pertinent resolutions relative to the holding of regular meetings, as well as stepping up of collections from the founders, intensification of campaign for enrollment, systematizing records, and appointing Atty. Jesus A. Arguelles as the first executive secretary and custodian of records were approved.

1 July 1948 The Western Philippine Colleges received Government Recognition No. 524 S. 1948, giving WPC the license to operate a complete secondary course.

In the midst of the hectic preparation for college participation in the July 4 Independence Day parade of the year, Atty. Arguelles was about to leave home to supervise work on the college float when he suffered a massive heart attack which caused his untimely demise.

University of Batangas OPEN JAM

According to the humanist philosophy of education, students must be taught to become humane. In other words, the students must be able to learn to become more of a human, i.e., a person who is rational, social, and political being. The then WPC, and later on, UB, had been consistent in including in the curriculum humanistic pedagogy. Aware that the pragmatic system of education had focused too much on science and mathematics so that the youth might be able to respond to the call for technological advancements, UB had provided a curriculum that would include arts and values education so that formation of the students would not only focus on the development of the mind but also of the heart. Hence, activities like Open Jams had been continuously organized. Musical groups like UB Chorale, UB Stringers, and UB Rondalla were being asked to perform in different occasions. UB Dance Company and the Tanghalang Dal'wa Singko and Teatro Anino were also established in order to develop the desire of the students to join in the performing arts activities. The Batangas Heritage Center with the help of Mr. Aguido Ebreo of the UB elementary Department extended training in arts to UBRA (the University of Batangas Recreation and Arts) group with the aim of tapping the student artists at their young age to develop the future members of the college students' organizations.

It was expected that the students' desire for the arts would be able to develop camaraderie in joining such activities leading to the development of moral values. UB placed importance in helping the students develop concern for the others and it is their belief that it is by way of teaching music and the arts that would help these young people to learn moral values. One's knowledge of music and arts would be helpful in making the students know what decisions must be made in order to create harmony and beauty. Inasmuch as beauty will always be connected with goodness, the development of the aesthetic values of the students would lead to the ethical growth of the persons.

1964 January 12 Mr. Juan Ylagan Javier passed away.

The idea set by the first president of WPC, and the one who is being considered as an expert in terms of running an educational institution, is that the students must be formed physically, intellectually, morally, and spiritually. It is already given that WPC, and eventually UB, must develop the students intellectually. It is for this reason that the Western Philippine Colleges before, and now the University of Batangas, have continuously worked hard in order to obtain a very high standard that proved how UB kept on aspiring of providing quality education to its clientele.

The University of Batangas was given an Autonomous Status by the Commission on Higher Education because of its compliance to the high standard set by the Commission. The University of Batangas is definitely living the dreams of the founders of working hard to provide best services to the young people not only of Batangas but also of the nearby provinces and also from other countries.

Aside from the intellectual formation, the University of Batangas did not fail to provide training for the physical development of its students. UB is upholding the Latin principle mens sana in corpore sano (A healthy mind in a healthy body). A frail body will not help the person obtain success. An intelligent person must possess physical strength in order to be able to perform his duties and responsibilities to his profession and to the society as a whole.

As a Catholic priest, Fr. Catapang made it a point that WPC would be established to its student's moral foundation. This was the reason why he was the one who first taught philosophy to the pioneers of the WPC. He made it a point that moral philosophy would have a place in the WPC curriculum in order to ensure that the students would be able to possess a good moral guideline to be able to make moral decisions in ethical situations. It is for this reason that WPC also upheld the philosophy of Humanism.

Atty. Francisco Perez would even take himself as an example to his friends in Brgy. Mahakot. They knew that Atty. Perez came from a poor family. But because of his assiduousness and hard work, he made himself to the top and thereby obtained a much better life. He was trying to make the people realize that education is not only a preparation for life. He was actually saying that education is life itself. For this reason, he was considered a follower of the philosophy of Pragmatism. He carried this belief to the Western Philippine Colleges where the teachers and the staff learned to work hard so that the students would grow professionally.

The founders believed that education should not only focus on the mere acquisition of knowledge. Rather, education should be made practical, workable, beneficial, and useful. If education would not lead to a better life, then it is considered to be futile. Students must be prepared so that they could obtain a better job. It should become beneficial not only to one's self but to the whole family as well as it was the idea of the founders that these students would become the means for the family to obtain a much better life. If education in WPC would not be made into use, then it would become a great failure not only on the part of the founders but of the whole faculty and staff of WPC. Hence, the founders kept on imbibing the love for work to the whole working force of WPC.

One of the criticisms given to the philosophy of education of Pragmatism was that pragmatists may have the tendency to become materialistic due to the idea of beneficiality of education, which was always referred to as material benefits. Pragmatism believed that truth is a cash value of an idea. For this reason, benefits were always related to monetary considerations.

The founders believed that growth and development must not It should rather pertain to the holistic only pertain to economics. growth of the person. According to Fr. Catapang, in his message to the graduates of 1951,

... You will always remember that she (WPC) has been caring for your physical, intellectual, moral, and spiritual education; that great part of your being today you owe to her; that she has imparted to you her best and you, in return, are expected to be ever loyal to her as she is loyal to you...

After obtaining independence, the Filipinos had the belief that they could already have a better life. But economic and political, as well as the moral development, were not obtained. The country is still being enslaved not anymore by the evil colonizers but by the present political and moral system of the country. Because of this, the task of rebuilding the nation is left in the hands of the educational institutions that actually have the capability of forming the young generations to become professionals and future leaders who will change the society for its betterment.

Immediately after the end of World War II, it was already the idea of the founders to make the society better. They thought of doing their share in order to reform the society by providing academic, moral and spiritual formation to the youth so that they could prepare these young people to face all the challenges of life and thereby become the main catalyst for change. They followed the philosophy of Reconstructionism. Everybody knew that the society needed a great reconstruction not only in terms of the physical edifices but also the moral and spiritual, as well as the academic formations of the people. Hence, the Western Philippine Colleges was founded.

One of the main criteria of the founders in hiring teachers was that they should imbibe in themselves a great sense of responsibility in giving these young people the hope needed so that they could improve their life. As Reconstructionists, the teachers must be able to change the mindset of the students so that they could start believing in themselves that there could still be a great future ahead of them. The WPC education must be able to prepare the students for a better life. The founders were basically following the pedagogical principle of Realism that "Education is a preparation for life."

This was what the founders were trying to tell the people of Batangas. Mr. Juan Y. Javier was telling his farmers and care-takers that they should send their children to college, and for that matter, to WPC, so that they could be made ready to face all the challenges of life. This was also the same message inculcated by Fr. Vicente Catapang to his parishioners in Taal and Sta. Teresita so much so that he even offered his owner-type jeep to be the means of transportation of the students who would want to enroll at the WPC and he offered it for free because he had a strong belief that this could be the only way to help these poor families escape from their miserable life.

Chapter Six

The Philosophy of Education of UB: The Legacy of the Founders

From our discussions of the short history of WPC, the life of the founders, and the contributions of the other personalities, it can be noted that the University of Batangas, whose pedagogy was based on the philosophical ideologies of the founders and the other contributors, has been consistent on particular philosophical systems. This chapter will elaborate the philosophy of education that the University of Batangas has been consistently putting into practice.

Consistent with what the Department of Education (DepEd) and the Commission on Higher Education (CHED) demand from all educational institutions, the University of Batangas upholds the pragmatic philosophy of education. The aim of education in the Philippines is to prepare the students for a better future. This is being done by forming the students according to the kind of profession that is very much needed by the different industries.

It can be noted that the present condition of the Philippines is no different from the economic and political situation of the country during the colonial periods. During the Spanish, American, and Japanese colonial periods, the Filipinos were living a miserable, and sometimes, horrendous life. The people were not given the freedom to rule themselves and to live their life according to how they wanted it to be lived. Economic growth was too slow, or even nonexistent. Therefore, the only desire of the Filipinos during that time was the attainment of freedom and independence in the hope that such freedom may lead the people to obtain a better life.

Abelardo was the eldest in a brood of three males and one female. He was born on August 15, 1933, to the former provincial board member of the province of Batangas, Atty. Francisco G. Perez, and housewife Conrada Benito of Manila. His hardworking parents sent him to St. Bridget's Academy for his primary education. During his elementary days, he was asked by the nuns to participate in the school play for a Christmas presentation. In the said play, Abelardo was asked to take the role of Sto. Niño because of his gentle manners and his saintly features.

He finished the intermediate level at the Batangas Elementary School while the secondary course was completed at the Batangas High School in 1949.

Atty Francisco was very much concerned about the healthcare of his constituents. Hence, he encouraged the young Abelardo to take up medical courses at the University of Sto. Tomas, which he completed in 1956. This was followed by an internship at the UST Hospital, residency training at the Batangas Provincial Hospital, and finally, at the New York Polyclinic Medical School and Hospital in New York City, USA, where he finished his residency in Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology in 1961.

While undergoing the training in New York, he grieved over the sudden loss of his father, who succumbed to a fatal heart attack. Gallantly, he faced the greatest challenge in his life. He wanted to go home in order to see his father for the last time. However, he also had to realize his father's dream of having a doctor in the family. He was assigned at the Bronx Municipal Hospital as Chief Resident in Otolaryngology in 1961-1962. This was followed by the appointment as Emergency Room Physician at St. Catherine Hospital in Brooklyn, New York from 1962-1963.

New York City did not only provide Dr. Abelardo with the expertise needed by a specialist. It also served as the setting for a romantic affair with Rose Martha MacIntosh, a beautiful Canadian from Newfoundland, Nova Scotia. She was a nurse assigned to the same Emergency Room of the hospital where Dr. Abelardo was undergoing his training.

Rose Martha MacIntosh and Dr. Abelardo Perez on their wedding day.

Two people of diverse cultures became in love with each other. The cultural barrier was crossed when Rose Martha decided to follow Dr. Abelardo to Batangas after his training. The two were married in a solemn ceremony at the historic San Agustin Church in Intramuros Manila on March 14, 1964, followed by a reception at the famous Aristocrat on Dewey Boulevard (now the Roxas Boulevard).

The union brought forth six children. However, only three survived. The eldest son, Michael Francis, who is a surgeon and an internist, is married to Dr. Janet Ongkiko, who gave him a daughter which they named Amanda Allison. Dr. Abegayle Machel Perez-Chua, who is currently the Vice President for Academic Affairs of the University of Batangas, is happily married to a banker, Stephen Chua, and they have three children, namely, Stefano Abelardo, Steven Andrew, and Stephanie Anastacia. Dr. Loralie Evangeline is enjoying a comfortable life as wife to an academican and director of the Learning Resource Center of University of Batangas, Frank Miranda and mother to Abelardo Francisco.

As a seasoned physician, Dr. Abelardo was an active fellow of the American Academy of Otolaryngology, International Colleges of Surgeon, American College of Surgeon, Philippine College of Surgeon and a corresponding fellow of the American Society of Facial Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery.

He was also a specialist (diplomate) as certified by the American Board of Otolaryngology, Philippine Board of Ophthalmology, Philippine Board of Otolaryngology, and Philippine Board for Cosmetic Surgery.

His expertise as a fellow and diplomate include his appointment as section chief (Audiology) in the Department of Otolaryngology at St. Luke's Medical Center. He led the Southern Tagalog Chapter of Otolaryngology (Head and Neck Surgery) as president and was also a member of the Philippine Board of Otolaryngology.

The family of Dr. Abelardo B. Perez.

Due recognition for his successful medical career was granted when he was awarded the Outstanding "Most Physician" in 1969 by the Philippine Medical Association and the "Asian Special Award" by the Asian Interactive Association on the Hearing Impaired in 1990.

Fresh from his specialty training abroad, he offered his services to the Western Philippine Colleges. All that he wanted was to be the school's physician. However, he was also appointed as Vice- Chairman of the Executive Committee, now the Board of Regents. The help of the college was passed to him for the second time when he was elected President of the Board of Trustees that replaced the Executive Committee in 1971.

The crowning glory of his educational venture was the elevation of the Western Philippine Colleges from the rank of a college to a university on August 1, 1996, and with the single honor of being the last president of Western Philippine Colleges and the first president of the University of Batangas.

Aside from being an excellent medical practitioner, he also had several achievements in the academe. He was an active member and officer of the Philippine Association of Colleges and Universities (PACU), president of the Philippine Associations of Private Schools, Colleges, and Universities (PAPSCU), officer of the Coordinating Council of Private Educational Association of the Philippines (COCOPEA) and adviser of the Batangas Private Schools Association (BAPRISA).

Endowed with the effective skills of leading people, he was elected president of the Maple Leaf Equipment Services Corporation and also as comptroller of Prime Career Development and Management Services.

Meanwhile, during his incumbency as college president (1964- 2007), he transformed the Western Philippine Colleges into a prime institution. His competent leadership brought about the continuous increase in enrolment, the modernization of school facilities and infrastructure, the development of human resources and the Level 1 and Level II accredited statuses granted to the different programs that started with the College of Liberal Arts, Education, and Commerce.

His dream of achieving the Level III status of the accredited programs was cut short by his untimely demise on April 18, 2007, after a dinner he shared with daughter Dr. Abegayle and some relatives on the eve of his supposed attendance in the Mid-year Conference in Baguio City. His sudden departure created a heavy toll on his family and the hospital staff of St. Patrick's Hospital and Medical Center (SPHMC) and a vacuum in the academe which ended all his plans and lifetime career after 74 colorful years. His manifold achievements and unfinished tasks are now no more but he had distinguished himself as a man ready to serve and a respected leader imbued with a high sense of vision, principles, and values.

Dr. Perez is the man whose life had been well-lived not for himself but for the service of others-the man who had touched so many lives-the man whose mortal remains had turned to dust but the memories of his fruitful earthly sojourn will be his legacy.

Abelardo B. Perez is the essence of service and commitment, lovingly remembered as a physician and academician-a respected leader of the professions.

Transportation and Communication and as Justice Secretary, chemical engineer, and a BS in Commerce graduate.

Nanay Ading disproved the essence of the poetical allusion that "East is East and West is West and never the two shall meet" with the cordial relationship she established for many years with her foreigner daughter-in-law.

When the Canadian Rose Martha MacIntosh came for the wedding to be the wife of son Abelardo, Nanay Ading fondly welcomed her, showered her with Batangas hospitality, regaled her with a Maria Clara-inspired bridal gown, and hosted a memorable wedding celebration at the San Agustin Church in Intramuros, which was followed by a sumptuous reception at the Aristocrat Restaurant in Davey Boulevard (now Roxas Boulevard).

The chemistry brought forth a strong bond that became stronger with the arrival of the grandchildren, Michael Francis, Abegayle Machel, and Loralie Evangeline. She lavished her grandchildren with tender loving care as grandma while they fondly addressed her as "Mama."

However, human beings are not destined to live forever. So, just like any other mortals, Mrs. Conrada Benito Perez, also known as Nanay Ading, bade her family goodbye on November 21, 1992. But she will always be remembered as a woman of service not only to others but to her family as well, a dutiful wife, a loving mother, a good keeper of the purse, and a caring "Mama" to her children and grandchildren.

Mrs. Josefina Villanueva-Javier

A gentle woman with soulful eyes framed by a pair of black-rimmed spectacles, hair knotted tightly into a bun, garbed in a simple black dress with a pair of low-heeled closed sandals that covered her feet—this was how the elderly woman named Josefina Villanueva Javier was remembered.

At the Western Philippine Colleges, Mrs. Javier was better known as Nanay Pining, who often visited the institution to offer her services without expecting any remuneration.

Josefina was actually the sister of the first wife of the founder and the second President of WPC, Juan Y. Javier. Josefina devoted her precious time and effort as the president's second wife and stepmother to the young siblings Ofelia, Rizalina, and Juanito Jr.

Mrs. Josefina Javier did not have any child of her own. But, needless to say, she took care of the orphans as her offsprings (actually her nieces and nephew) with love and a maternal care needed by her sister's growing children. Her admiration for the children created good chemistry. Hence, the kids grew up under her wings upon the death of her husband and the father of the children, Mr. Juan Y. Javier.

As a single parent, Josefina guided the children to be good Christians and sent them to Catholic schools for their educational development. She nurtured them until the time when the two ladies were already raising their own families while the youngest ward decided to be a bachelor forever.

Every day, after the death of Mr. Javier, Mrs. Josefina would be riding the owner-type jeep of Mr. Javier. She would ask the driver to bring her to the church so she would be able to hear mass. After the mass, she would stay in the church patio for a tete-a-tete with the lady members of church organizations like the Apostolado de la Oracion. She would often attend the novenas or joined the meetings of the various church associations to which she was affiliated.

Two Josefina was also known for her generosity. She spearheaded the collection of funds for charitable purposes. Because of these works, she became a popular figure and a friend of all those whose lives she touched.

While the Western Philippine Colleges was still in its infant stage, Mrs. Javier was one of the founders' angels who kept the fire of enthusiasm burning. She assisted the pioneers in surmounting all challenges and faced the herculean task of founding an institution of learning with limited financial resources by providing interest-free

As an advocate of religious services, she initiated the movement for the primary school children of WPC to receive their First Holy Communion. She also took charge of the monthly first Friday devotion by offering the mass and the regular recitation of the Holy Rosary.

Nanay Pining was very much dedicated to the observance of church holy days like the Feast of the Immaculate Conception every December 8. It is for this reason that she requested the school administration to include the Feast of the Immaculate Conception in the school calendar as a non-class day and a church holy day. She insisted that the Immaculate Conception is the patroness of Batangas and, therefore, due respect and honor must be accorded by the Western Philippine Colleges to the patroness. Unfortunately, there was a time when the Registrar failed to include December 8 in the school calendar; hence, classes were held. This made her very furious because of the non-observance of the holy day of obligation.

Being a woman of service, she would come to WPC from time to time to help in her own little way. For this reason, Nanay Pining was very much loved and respected by the students and personnel from the Board of Directors to the lowest employee.

Nanay Pining was missed by everybody who knew her. She was advised by her doctor to stay at home and rest because of her failing health. Eventually, a vacuum was created by her journey to the Great Beyond to enjoy an everlasting life of service.

Dr. Aurora Babasa wrote that she would never forget the image of a sad-looking elderly with soulful eyes framed by a pair of black rimmed eyeglasses while seated on the right side of an owner type jeep on her way to church in order to fulfill her mission as a religious advocate of service.

Mrs. Javier's granddaughter, Mrs. Lily Marlene Hernandez- Bonn visualized Mrs. Javier in the following words:

W

Since Lola Pining was a prayerful woman, we thought it would be best to describe her by "attributing/paraphrasing" Proverbs 31 as follows:

'A wife of noble character who can find? She is Her husband has full worth far more than rubbles. confidence in her and lacks nothing of value. She brings him good, not harm, all the days of her life.

She selects eggs and wraps them with eager hands. She is like the merchant ships, bringing her food to priests, neighbors, and friends.

She gets up while it is still dark and attends daily Mass; she provides food for her family and portions for her entire household.

She considers a field and buys it; out of it grows rice, fruits, and vegetables. She sets about her work vigorously; her arms are strong for her tasks. She sees that her trading is profitable, and her lamp does not go out at night.

In her hand, she holds the distaff and grasps the spindle with her fingers. She opens her arms to the poor and extends her hands to the needy. She has no fear for her household; for all of them are clothed. She makes coverings for her bed; she is clothed in fine linen and purple, though, being frugal, at other times, she is clothed in chicken-feed sackcloth. Her husband is respected at the city printing press and school, where he takes his seat among the elders of the province. She is clothed with strength and dignity; she can laugh at the days to come. She speaks with wisdom, and faithful instruction is on her tongue. She watches over the affairs of her household and does not eat the bread of idleness but prays and reflects often.

Her children arise and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praises her: 'Many women do noble things, but you surpass them all. Charm is deceptive, and beauty is fleeting, but a woman who fears the LORD is to be praised.

Give her the reward she has earned, and let her works bring her praise at the school she helped build.

Reminiscing the First UB President: Dr. Abelardo B. Perez

Abelardo Benito Perez was a seasoned leader of the medical profession and an idealist who strived for excellence in the field of education. His vision in upholding education became the guiding principle of his younger brother, the current President of the University of Batangas, Dr. Hernando B. Perez.

It was probably from Abelardo whom our current president had learned the true value of leadership because Abelardo was noted three beautiful daughters: Sonia L. Velasquez-Mayo (wife of Atty. Vicente A. Mayo, the former governor of the province of Batangas and the former Chairman of the Board of WPC/UB); Adelina L. Velasquez- Quizon (wife of Fiscal Carmelo Quizon, the former Corporate Secretary of the Board of Regents of WPC/UB); and Anita L. Velasquez-Cauntay (who worked as the Purchasing Officer of WPC/UB).

Peping volunteered his services as an engineer and was commissioned as First Lieutenant of the United States Armed Forces of the Far East (USAFFE) during the American-Japanese War. Unfortunately, Peping was killed in action in Bataan on April 4, 1942. Nena was widowed at 28 years old. Out of her great love for her husband and for her three daughters, Nena never remarried. At around the time her husband was killed, everything they owned was either burned or bombed out as a consequence of the ongoing war. This was a universal experience of the entire country during the Japanese occupation. The Japanese forces would either annihilate what was useless for them and rob what was useful. During this time, Nena struggled to make a living for her orphaned children, who were then aged 5, 32, and 1 1/2 years respectively.

As a mother, Mrs. Aurora Velasquez worked hard and strove diligently to take care of and support well her daughters. She struggled to set up a pharmacy in P. Burgos corner D. Silang Streets in Batangas City. She also managed a baby dress embroidery business as a contractor, and co-partnered a gas station when gasoline was a mere 28 centavos per liter.

Nena also owned a pawnshop at her residence and became a Chemistry instructor of Western Philippine Colleges. She served the school as a Secretary, and then as Treasurer, a School Registrar, a member of the Board of Trustees, and as Auditor until she retired at 80 years old. Part of this responsibilities was her exceptional skills in using the abacus (her calculator), a daily fixture on her work table. She excelled in mental mathematics and calculation. skills and talents were external manifestations of a systematic and organized way of thinking, mirrored also in her daily living.

Adelina (the second daughter of piano teacher Mrs. Aurora Velasquez, with her Marcela Agoncillo Jr.

Nena was also known for her deep religiosity. She used to join religions and civic organizations. She was a former President of the Catholic Women's League (CWL) and equally active with the Miraculous Medal Association of the Basilica of the Immaculate Conception. She was also a member of another civic group known as the Zonta Club of Batangas. As a daily Mass-goer, she occupied a permanent seat near the middle aisle until her late 80's. Thereafter, when her knees gave way and the doctor advised her to lessen her trips outside of her home, she would sit on her favorite rocking chair, glued to her TV set for daily mass celebrations, more especially those days when she could not go to church anymore.

Being a majority stockholder of WPC, which metamorphosed into the University of Batangas on its 50th Foundation Anniversary, Nena valued the importance of education and strongly believed that possessing a college degree could improve the life of the people for the better. This was the reason why she would send her under privileged scholars to College, who after graduation, were assisted into finding employment. Many of them are now successful business owners or employees, who live happily lives with their respective families here and abroad. Mrs. Velasquez found fulfillment in serving the Lord through helping seminarians to become priests and novices to become religious nuns. This act was also continued even by her daughters.

Mrs. Velasquez during the inauguration of the Aurora Fountain, with Atty. Vicente A. Mayo, Mrs. Sonia V. Mayo, and Adelina V. Quizon.

Nena's most beloved treasure and source of joy was her family-her children and their spouses: Vicente Mayo (Sonia), Carmelo Quizon (Adelina), and Aristedes Cauntay (Anita), her 12 to grandchildren whom she saw grow up and have families of their grandchildren. own, and her great- She completed her mission on earth on January 30, 2010. Her life, fulfilled and satisfied with the services she rendered, had seemed to become an invitation that invites the members of the UB community, both faculty, employees, and students, to immerse themselves as kins of founders; albeit not by consanguinity but by anima. Her busy life during her time would always be reverberating and sonorously resounding to the UB family clouded by trials and tribulations. Mrs. Aurora's life from the humble beginning had reached its summit through service, dedication, charity, and value.

Today, in recalling the life of Mrs. Velasquez, the UB family is being invited to humble themselves while rendering the best service that we could give to reroute the detrimental society into a more human, caring, and selfless reality. Mrs. Aurora Velasquez' absence today leads all of us to realize that sometimes, a working absence is more essential and effective than a stagnant presence.

Mrs. Conrada Benito-Perez

Conrada B. Perez was born on December 30, 1907. She was the low-key wife of the former senior Board Member and renowned politician, Atty. Francisco G. Perez, of Mahakot, Batangas City. She was the loving mother to siblings Dr. Abelardo, Dr. Hernando, Chemical Engineer Rolando, and Commerce graduate Edithalden.

To be the wife of a politician in the 1950's was a great honor and a privilege. But Mrs. Perez did not take her position for granted. She maintained instead of a low profile and was more known as a kind lady with many friends and acquaintances, although a stranger in her husband's hometown. Conrada was a typical Manileña as manifested by the slur and speech intonation that characterize a city-bred speaker.

Being a woman so gentle in manners, Conrada captivated the people with her winsome smile as she talked and exchanged pleasantries with friends. Despite her simplicity as a homebody, she was conscious of her personal appearance. Hence, she could not leave the house without powdering her nose, putting on lipstick, and wearing perfume. She had a flair for beautiful and precious jewels. However, they are not fastidious as to the cost of each piece of jewelry.

Mrs. Perez was a devout Catholic, whose patron saint was St. Anthony of Padua the waist, which was the color of the cassock of St Anthony. During the first Saturdays of the month, she would wear the navy blue and white collar dress of the members of the Catholic Women's League, the church organization that she was actively engaged in.

The saying goes: "The way to a man's heart is through his belly." With this adage in mind, Mrs. Perez used to cook delicious adobo, tasty caldereta, and other flavourful dishes that satisfied the palates of her husband and children. To them, she was a good cook-a celebrity family chef. She would always make it a point to satisfy the belly of her family and she was able to win her family's hearts.

Conrada was known as a hospitable and selfless lady, who took in the relatives of her husband and provided them with a free board and lodging if they would be studying at the Western Philippine Colleges. To them, Mrs. Conrada Perez was their Nanay Ading, their second mother, mentor, and guardian.

Although Atty. Francisco G. Perez was a politician, they did not enrich themselves with the government's money but just settled themselves through honest earnings. It could have been difficult for Nanay Ading to meet up both ends due to the number of people that they were helping, and the expenses of sending four children to school. However, her purse was never empty due to her skillful She did not become selfish nor budgeting of the family finances. stingy as shown by the financial assistance she gave to the institution which her husband co-founded. She infused the needed amount for the salary of the teachers and the other incidental expenses during the time when the school was struggling for existence.

Unfortunately, Nanay Ading lost her husband at a time when he was most needed for the upbringing and professional development of the growing children. Luckily, she was appointed by the Board of Directors to take over the position of Treasurer, the position which was formerly held by her departed husband at the Western Philippine Colleges.

Mustering enough courage and fortitude in meeting difficulties Mrs. Perez nurtured her children to be good Christians and good citizens. The intensity of the mother's love and selfless dedication for the welfare of her children as a solo parent produced a physician, who specialized in New York City, USA as an otolaryngologist, a lawyer- politician congressman twice appointed as a Cabinet Secretary of made it sure that the founders' effort for WPC would not be brought to waste. These women were the following:

Mrs. Flordelisa Arguelles

One of those who worked hard in order to continue what the founders had started was Mrs. Flordelisa Martinez- Arguelles, the beloved wife of Atty. Jesus Lorenzo A. Arguelles.

Mrs. Flordelisa epitomized words of St. Ignatius of Loyola, which says that: "A life lived for others is a life worth living." Dr. Victor M. Arguelles, one of the sons of Mrs. Flordelisa M. Arguelles and Atty. Jesus Lorenzo A Arguelles attested that his mother was Mrs. Flordelisa M. Arguelles, wife of able to live her life according to this Atty. Jesus Lorenzo Arguelles.

Mrs. Flordelisa M. Arguelles during the Founders' Memorial Lecture on February 23, 2018, the following data were known that Flordelisa was born on May 2, 1907, to a middle-class family in Lemery, Batangas. Her father, Fortunato Martinez, was a successful businessman in their town, who owned a fleet of fishing boats. It was from him that the young Flordelisa was able to learn the value of hard work. Her mother, Josefa Palinsad Martinez, was the one who taught Flordelisa the values of wisdom and compassion.

The earnings from the family business provided Flordelisa and her siblings, Gliceria (who became the first principal of the WPC Elementary Department), Gregoria, Vicente, Leonardo, Crisostomo, Eufemia, and Aniceto, a comfortable life. All the siblings of Flordelisa were provided with good education.

For her basic education, Flordelisa went to an elementary school in Lemery. Later on, she went to Batangas High School where she finished her secondary education. During her college years, she went to the University of the Philippines where she finished her Bachelor of Science degree in Library Science. Every vacation from school, she would go home to Lemery in order to be with her siblings. She would be helping the family in weaving nipa sidings and roofs, for which they were paid small sums. Although the payment was not big, it did not hold back Flordelisa from doing the weaving. They considered the work to be enjoyable and at the same time dignified.

With the death of their father from typhoid fever, and with no one ready to take over the business, they decided to sell their boats and transfer to Manila where her siblings were to continue their education. The family lived in Sta. Cruz district where the Samaniego's, their relatives from Lemery, were also living. The Samaniego family became their closest friends and confidants for the rest of their lives.

During her stay at the University of the Philippines, Flordelisa met a fellow Batangueño, Jesus Lorenzo A. Arguelles. Jesus was the youngest of four brothers. He was born into a middle-class family. His mother, Rita Añonuevo Arguelles, was a successful businesswoman whose family owned a parcel of land in Sto. Niño, Batangas. It was from his mother Rita that Jesus became a good cook. Jesus' father, Mariano Arguelles, who died early on, was remembered as a compassionate man.

Jesus, who was a law student, a poet, a stage actor, an athlete, and a playwright, was able to win the heart of Flordelisa, the "Rose of Lemery." While Jesus was concentrating on his law studies, Flordelisa pursued a teaching career in a public school in Manila. With the outbreak of the Second World War, the Martinez family returned to Batangas. Flordelisa was reunited with and later married Jesus. The Martinez family, together with Jesus and his brothers and their families, sought refuge in Sto. Niño where they stayed until the end of the war.

After the war, the Arguelles brothers went back to their normal lives. The eldest, Angel Arguelles, became the first Filipino doctor of the Bureau of Science, the forerunner of the present Department of Science and Technology (DOST); Vicente, who also his children would be able to obtain a good education and eventually obtain success as professionals.

According to Jim Hartness and Neil Eskelin (2014), "The tragedy of our educational system is that we can attend school for eighteen years and never have one hour of instruction in goal-setting." This is actually true. However, during the time of Atty. Francisco Perez, he was insisting that people must have to learn to set a goal for themselves. He was telling the people that education should be the means in order to realize their goals. This was also the reason why he wanted to make it sure that WPC would be helping the students to achieve their goals and realize their dreams.

If Atty. Francisco G. Perez was alive today, he would not allow the University of Batangas to be merely a diploma mill. He would definitely make it a point that UB would be able to provide the students with the kind of education that will be used in setting up their goals and achieving their dreams. He knew for a fact that he was able to achieve his ambitions because he was a diligent student and he motivated himself so that he could realize his dreams.

His passion for education, his dedication to the attainment of his goals, and his big heart for the poor and the young ones became his legacy. He was primarily an educator. He was even the teacher of his son, Atty. Hernando Perez in a political science course. The imprints that he left into the minds of his students were also his own legacy that his students carried with them all throughout their lives.

The Life of Atty. Pablo C. Umali

Atty. Pablo C. Umali

Little has been known about Atty. Pablo C. Umali. This was because he decided to retire from WPC during the summer of 1951, five years after being a part of the institution in order more time as a law to spend practitioner in Lipa City.

Pablo Umali was born on June 30, 1908, at Sta. Teresita, Batangas. He also came from a poor family. He was also a working student.

Flordelisa and Jesus lived in a rented house in P. Gomez St. in Batangas City. The Arguelles ancestral home in Evangelista Street, which is near the present site of the market, was destroyed during the war. Atty. Arguelles continued his legal work, mostly pro bono cases. In 1946, Atty. Arguelles co-founded the Western Philippine Colleges but he died in 1947 from a fatal heart attack. He was only 47 years old.

The early demise of Atty. Jesus suddenly thrusts Flordelisa to continue the unfinished work of her husband. She served the Western Philippine Colleges in the following capacities: Member of the Board of Trustees, the First Principal of High School Department and the First Librarian on a concurrent capacity; Vice President, and later on, as the first woman president for four years: 1971-1974.

Dr. Victor M. Arguelles, the eldest son of Flordelisa, wrote that his mother is many things to many people: Ma'am to her students, Mommy to countless scholars whom she sent to school, Flooring to her high school classmates, which included former Supreme Court Chief Justice and Batasan Speaker Querube Makalintal, Mama to her two sons, Victor and Jesus. But to her family and fellow Lemereños, she was and always will be a "Rose of Lemery," an embodiment of charm, intelligence, and integrity.

Mrs. Flordelisa M. Arguelles died on October 4, 1994.

Mrs. Aurora L. Velasquez

Susana Aurorah Javier nicknamed "Nena," was born on August 11, 1914. Her parents were Alejandro "Andoy" Luansing and Simeona "Monang" Javier, who was the only sister of Juan Y. Javier.

Nena was only four years old when her mother, Monang, died. She was left and her younger sibling, Alejandro "Danding" Luansing Jr. orphaned by their mother at a very young age.

Danding and Nena during their Philippine Women's University (PWU) childhood days.

In her early age, Nena had a very humble beginning. She was a product of public schools from primary to secondary level. During that time, the pedagogical approach that public schools were following was that which is known as the teacher-centered education where students would have a very rigid educational discipline. The students were trained to undergo disciplinary measures if they would fail to study or if they were unable to finish any school chores. But this did not prevent young Nena from finishing her studies. She knew she had to be brave for her younger brother.

Nena graduated from the Batangas High School (now the Batangas National High School) in 1931. Her pursuit in education became more steadfast when she obtained her tertiary education from the College of Pharmacy in 1931. In the following year, Nena passed the government examination which gave her the title as a Licensed Pharmacist.

Buddhism holds that if there is no way for anyone to avoid suffering in this world, then there is no way for anyone to escape being stuck in a loving connection. On March 19, 1936, Nena, at 22 years old, married Jose Raymundo "Peping" Navarro Velasquez after discovering the true meaning of love. Women of 22 were considered to be of marriageable age at that time, and it was thought that they already possessed the maturity and wisdom necessary to raise a husband and children. Peping was already starting a family because she was a licensed engineer in both mechanical and electrical engineering and a nurse professional. Capable of Peping and Nena on their March 19 wedding day, Peping and Nena received the blessing of 1936.

WPC (now UB) had grown literally and figuratively from 48 students to an enrollment of almost 14,000 students who were once housed in semi-permanent buildings to the present modern concrete edifices and equipped with computer-based facilities that can uphold quality education. Countless alumni had passed through the portals of their alma mater and had brought fame and glory to the university and the country and elsewhere as a fitting tribute to their beloved institution.

It has been made a mission of the WPC, and now the University of Batangas, to create an environment that will give opportunities for students to boost their love of wisdom for a better realization of the meaning of life, strengthen their faith in God, and enhance their desire to serve their fellowmen. These became the mantra of a true UBian.

The UB students' desire for wisdom, which helped them realize their duties as servants of their community, has helped them achieve academic prominence in Engineering, Business and Accountancy, Liberal Arts, Education, Allied Medical Sciences, Law, Technical Education, Computer Education, Hospitality Management and Nursing and has lead them to cope with the global trends in technology and education.

Students' involvement in collaborative programs developed transformation leadership and strengthened the core values instilled by the Founding Fathers. The participation of UB in competitions fostered challenges; hence, they had become resourceful, critical, creative, ethical, and responsible. The students' best potentials are harnessed to the maximum. It is for this reason that UB is considered the Cradle of Champions with the contestants in academic, cultural, and sports bringing home the "proverbial bacon."

The University of Batangas is a top performing school in the licensure examinations in Engineering, Education, Allied Medical Sciences, Business and Accountancy, Nursing and Midwifery and Law. Examinees obtained scores way above the national passing score and at times garnered a 100% passing score in Civil, Electrical, midwifery, and Physical Therapy Board Examinations.

The first ten years after gaining the university status actually laid the foundation for blossoming into a mature university. It is not only blossoming but constantly growing with varied curricular offerings like the Doctoral Program, Expanded Tertiary Education Equivalency and Accreditation Program (ETEEAP), Review Center, and short-term courses with physical facilities always updated for quality education. President Hernando B. Perez, in his 2008-2009 Annual Report said: "We are climbing to the top. This fact is undeniable. These accomplishments of UB truly exemplify that the University of Batangas is "Undeniably the Best."

Success after success came. Levels III and IV as well as Deregulated Status has been granted by PACUCOA. AJA-JAZ-ANZ has granted the University of Batangas the ISO 9001:2008 Certified Status in 2009. At the same time, the Commission on Higher Education (CHED) awarded UB a 3-year Autonomous status and recognized also UB as the only Center of Excellence in Teacher Education in Batangas province. This was granted to UB in 2010 and is currently being maintained. UB realizes the fact that education is an investment. Parents spend money in order to provide their children with the best education possible in order to prepare them for a better future. In this regard, UB sees to it that the money spent shall not be wasted by ensuring the quality of education that it provides to the students. UB finds ways in order to get all the accreditations needed in order to maintain high quality of education.

All the accrediting agencies see to it that the institution that they are about to accredit has obtained and is maintaining the following characteristics:

1. The school is devoted to its mission;
2. The school knows itself, Le, it has thought deeply about the services it offers to students, the family, and the community;
3. The school is student-oriented. Its philosophy of education is suitable for the students and encompasses the development of the whole individual;
4. The school keeps its promises. It promises only what it can deliver;
5. The school accepts objective assessment. It is prepared to open its doors periodically for regular evaluation by the school community and by outside experienced evaluators and accreditors;
6. The school is constantly seeking to improve its performance in curricular and other areas, with an on-going focus on student learning and well-being;
7. The school plans for the future (Newsweek 26 April, 2010, 54).

As part of the ongoing nature of the evaluation process, accredited schools are continually planning for future developments. And this is what the University of Batangas had been busy with during all these years. With the status that UB has achieved, it only shows that the aforementioned characteristics have been observed and practiced. It gives an assurance to its clientele that it will continue to improve its learning outcomes so that it will become all the more capable of making the school a part of the people's life.

President Hernando B. Perez considered UB as the "University of the Future" and as a "University of Choice." With this battle cry, more and more changes and projects were initiated such as the publication of the first book about the life and works of the first WPC President and one of the founders, Rev. Fr. Vicente R. Catapang. The book was actually written by Fr. Catapang himself and Batangas Heritage Center republished the book with annotations from Dr. Lino L. Dizon and articles from Dr. Aurora M. Babasa about her personal experiences about Fr. Catapang and from Dr. Lionel E Buenaflor about the philosophy of education that Fr. Catapang was trying to uphold the western Philippine colleges.

The onset of the 21 century brought about the opening of new linkages and reaching of new borders like the exchange programs with Korea and Japan; successful presentation of papers at the ASAIHL (Association of Southeast Asian Institute of Higher Learning) International Convention in Malaysia and other foreign countries where UB presenters excelled; partnership with SMART and other industries.

Likewise, faculty members proved the popularity of UB inasmuch as they were elected to key positions in regional and national organizations like the Philippine Association of law Schools (PALS), Philippine Association for Teacher Education (PAFTE), Philippine National Philosophical Research Society (PNPRS), the Kapisanan ng Bahay Saliksikan sa Bansa (KABANSA, Inc.) the Network of CALABARZON Educational Institutions (NOCEL, Inc.), the CALABARZON Research Council (CRC), and research fellows of Philippine Society for Educational Research and evaluation (PSERE), and Council of Hotel and Restaurant Educators in the Philippines (COHREP).

In order to enhance the quality education that UB provides, new buildings had been constructed and the old ones had a facelift. New courses were also offered in line with the demands of the time. UB's expansion program had already crossed the high seas and has traversed the highlands and cities; thereby, clearing all barriers to carry out its commitment to academic growth and development.

The College of Graduate Studies branched out to Calapan, Oriental Mindoro in the Masteral level at the Luna Goco Colleges since the opening of the first semester of School Year 2010-2011. Likewise, a Memorandum of Agreement was entered into by the University of Batangas and the Calayan Educational Foundation, Inc. (CEFI) for a partnership in the Graduate Extension Program since June 2010 in Lucena City.

The bandwagon created by the University has started rolling and blazing new trails. It will keep on going and going even beyond the 21st century. With the trail set by the founders and being followed by the faculty and staff through the leadership of the present administrators, the University's journey to the Greater Heights is on Commerce under Dean Pablo C. Umall. The High School and the Elementary departments were also started with Mrs. Flordeliza M. Arguelles, the wife of Atty, Arguelles, and Ms. Gliceria Martinez, the sister of Mrs. Arguelles, as the principals respectively. Rev. Pr. Vicente Catapang was elected by the Board of Trustees as President and Over-all Administrator because of his wisdom and expertise as an end Over Atty. Jesus Lorenzo A. Arguelles was elected Executive Secretary.

Due to a sudden increase of enrollment from 48 to 78 students after a year, the classes were transferred to the javier house, which was located on the corner of D. Silang and P. ### The Life of Atty. Jesus Lorenzo A. Arguelles

Atty. Jesus Lorenzo Añonuevo Arguelles was born on August 10, 1900. He was the son of Mariano Arguelles and Rita Añonuevo of Batangas City. He had his secondary education from the Batangas National High School and obtained his Bachelor of Arts and Law Degrees at the University of the Philippines.

Atty. Arguelles was not only a lawyer but a poet and a playwright. He loved playing basketball, tennis, and boxing. He used to play tennis with his tennis buddy, Dr. Godofredo Rosales, the brother of the former archbishop of Manila, Cardinal Gaudencio Rosales. Atty. Jesus Lorenzo A. Arguelles.

As a lawyer, Atty. Arguelles handled cases for the poor. The cases that he used to handle were almost always pro bono especially upon knowing that his client was coming from a poor family. Those who knew Atty. Arguelles as a person and co-worker would describe him to be a father and a family man who was known for his kindness and compassion. With the same vision as that of Mr. Juan Javier of creating a better life for the people, especially the poor, he dedicated himself to the establishment of the Western Philippine Colleges. His burning desire to make the plan of establishing a school possible was very much attested of him. He worked hard in order to promote the WPC to the people within and outside Batangas. He would also go to different barangays and around the town outside Batangas in order to promote the Western Philippine Colleges.

This great dedication of Atty. Arguelles to WPC could be the great reason why he had a heart attack which led to his early death. Mrs. Arguelles, the wife of Atty. Jesus Arguelles, who took the latter's place as the Corporate Secretary of the Board of Trustees, wrote of this incident as:

In the midst of the frenetic preparations for the opening of the classes on July 1, 1947 and also for the college participation on the July 4 Independence Parade of that year, Mr. Arguelles was about to leave home to help in putting up a float for the parade when he suffered a heart attack that led to his very untimely demise. He was only 47 years old when he passed away.

Atty. Jesus Arguelles died on July 3, 1947, at the very young age. His life may be too short but his existence and, more importantly, his death, brought a great inspiration to the WPC community to really push through with what had been started by Atty. Arguelles.

The Legacy of Atty. Jesus L. Arguelles

Atty. Arguelles' life was indeed too short. If one would consider the length of time that Atty. Arguelles spent in the establishment and eventually the growth of WPC, his contribution could not be considered as great as that of the other founders because of his untimely death. However, his existence, and more importantly, his death brought greater inspiration to the WPC community.

Aware of the hard work rendered by Atty. Arguelles in the establishment of WPC, the other founders, as well as his co-workers and other employees of WPC, became all the more determined to pull their efforts in order to realize the dream of Atty. Arguelles of providing quality education to the youth. They did not want to put the great efforts of Dr. Arguelles to waste. His death became the energizer for everybody so much so that, as they were mourning for the loss, they were at the same time celebrating because WPC had just started performing its responsibility of providing services for the youth.

Atty. Arguelles' philanthropic heart made him too excited to work hard in order to create a better foundation for the newly-established Western Philippine Colleges. He knew there were still a lot of things to be done and he was in a hurry because he already felt that everything must be done in too short a time. For one thing, the classes had already started and there were still a lot of things to be prepared including the promotion of WPC and prepare at the same time the classes, the classrooms, and orient the faculty of what the founders would want in the academic formation of the students.

Secondly, he knew that something was about to happen. He had already premonitions and he knew that he had to do everything as fast as he could so that he would be able to establish something for the benefit of the WPC. In his last breath, he was thinking of WPC. He devoted his life for the benefit of this institution. He sacrificed his life so that he would be able to give life to the poor young boys and girls. He sacrificed his own in order to give life to the others. His was a life of sacrifice, a gift for the others. This was the reason why his wife, Mrs. Flordeliza M. Arguelles, also sacrificed her life in order to fulfill what Atty. Arguelles had started. Atty. Arguelles' life became his own legacy.

The Life of Fr. Vicente R. Catapang

Vicente R. Catapang was born in the barrio of Sambat in Taal, Batangas on September 11, 1888, of humble circumstances. Christened after the patron saint of the day, San Vicente de Leon—the Spanish Abbot and martyr killed by Arian Visigoths in 630 AD—he had presumably his early education in his hometown. An 1895 book about Batangas by Manuel Sastron already mentioned about instances of Instruccion Publica (public instruction) in both the capital of Batangas and the town of Taal.

Though lamentable and backward, Manuel Sastron—a former Civil Governor of Batangas, a Representative to the Spanish Cortes, Escuela de Niños and an Escuela de Niñas, the forerunners of the public school, in this pueblo by the lake, and even among its barrios. Sastron cited also the presence of two Latin teachers in Taal (Don Florentino Laurena and Don Trinidad Manalo), making the segunda enseñanza (grammar school) already accessible in the town. The young Vicente benefited from their instructions; thereby, preparing him early for the classical language requirements of priesthood a decade later.

After learning his first alphabet at the school run by the family of his mother at the same barrio, Vicente went on to study in the private school of Don Benito Punzalan in Taal, Batangas. When the revolution broke out, Vicente was made a worker and messenger of Gen. Classes being held at the San Jose Major Seminary. Martin Cabrera. The young Vicente had already seen the ravages of war during his younger days.

After the Philippine Revolution, Vicente studied at the Liceo de Manila (founded by Dr. Alejandro Albert in 1903), presently the Manila Central University, and at the Seminario Central de San Francisco Javier (also the Colegio Apostolico de San Jose, now the San Jose Major Seminary). He was ordained as a priest on April 28, 1912, by the Most Rev. Giuseppe Petrelli, the first bishop of the Diocese of Lipa.

In 1913, the very young Fr. Catapang put up a preparatory school for the seminary in Bauan, Batangas upon the order of Bishop Petrelli. In February 1914, with the insistence of the Bishop, he co-founded a seminary-college first housed in the convent of Bauan, Batangas-the predecessor of the present St. Francis de Sales Seminary in Lipa City. On the same year, he organized the parish of Sampaloc, Tayabas where he constructed the church and built a convent. In 1916, he was sent to Tombol, now the town known as Rosario, Batangas, where he, as a parish priest, led many people back to Catholicism.

In 1920's, Fr. Catapang was granted scholarship by the Diocese of Lipa under Bishop Alfredo Verzosa in order to pursue higher studies in the United States. Fr. Catapang studied at the Notre Dame University, South Bend, Indiana, which was run by the Holy Cross Fathers. He arrived in the Summer of 1922. He became affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and the St. Thomas Philosophical Society. He finished his Master's of Arts degree in Education in 1923. He had for his thesis the "Development and the Present Status of Education in the Philippine Islands." This book was reprinted by the Batangas Heritage Center. The convent in the Church of Bauan which became the house of the seminarians of the Diocese of Lipa a year later, he took up his degree as Doctor of Philosophy in the same university. The yearbook of Notre Dame University, known as The Dome of 1924 described Fr. Catapang as:

Literature, languages, and philosophy are Father Catapang's hobbies—these, and fun with the other boys in Sorin. He is an ardent admirer of Notre Dame, and Notre Dame is no less an admirer of him. If he stays here, the Philippines will have one just grievance against the United States.

Fr. Catapang was among the early Filipino clerics who took up higher studies, an achievement that got the attention of prominent Church historians like Fr. Schumacher, SJ.

In 1926, his thesis was published by the Stratford Company of Boston, Massachusetts in the United States. The book bore the same title. It was among the few books by native Filipinos to have been given this privilege that included the caliber of Camilo Osias, Conrado Benitez, Francisco Reyes, and Hilario Moncado. As stated, it dealt with the history of the Philippine Educational System. brief History of the Miraculous Image Fr. Vicente was not only a MANITA priest. He was also an educator. His love for education brought him to accept a professorial chair Another book written by Fr. Catapang. at the University of Manila and the positions as Dean of Philosophy and Letters, Director of the Graduate Studies, and as the Dean of Studies of the said university.

In the 1930's, Fr. Catapang was included among the clergy of the Archdiocese of Lipa, particularly as a staff of Ang Filipinas, a monthly religious journal. It was during this time that Fr. Catapang became a devotee of the Black Nazarene, which resulted in the writing of a Tagalog book, which he titled Maikling Kasaysayan ng Simbahan ng Quiapo at ng Kanyang The young Fr. Vicente Catapang. Mapaghimalang Larawan: Hesus Nazareno. This book was published in 1937 and was also translated into English. Father Catapang was also responsible in the propagation of the stories about the Our Lady of Caysasay from his hometown Taal, of whom he was also a devotee.

Father about was Fr. Catapang was assigned in various parishes of Batangas, including the parishes in Taal and Bauan. In 1943, Fr. Catapang received an order from Bishop Alfredo Verzosa. The good bishop asked Fr. Catapang to establish a prospective parish in Taal and the parish center would be placed in Sambat, his place of origin. The first chapel was constructed on a piece of land lent by the relatives of Fr. Catapang. This chapel was dedicated to Santa Teresita del Niño Jesus. Fr. Catapang was made the parish priest of this church. During the Commonwealth Period, he was listed as a coadjutor of Bauan, where he was stationed until the outbreak of the Second World War.

A newspaper clipping about an American G.I. from Madison, Wisconsin, Paul Karberg, during the year of liberation in Batangas (1945), told of a bishop of the Diocese of Lipa and was known as the great builder. Due to his holiness and great contribution, he is now due for beatification encounter with Fr. Catapang. Meeting Filipinos of all ages, who were feeling places still annoyed by the Japanese-in endless procession came weary men and women on foot, in high-wheeled, overloaded carts pulled by small skinny horses, and on wooden sleds pulled by fat, slowly-plodding carabao"-Paul and his companion decided to accommodate in their jeep "two dusty and tired-looking priests, dressed in the customary long black gown but with large straw hats protecting them from the sun's merciless rays, we beckoned to them." The soldiers learned that there were "some distant seminary beyond the hills and had been on the road for a couple of days. The elder priest, a slight little fellow with horn-rimmed glasses and about 40 years old, was joyful in stating that we were some of the first Americans he had chatted with in three years.

During their ride, there was a talk of football in the jeep, especially the teams of Notre Dame ("The Four Horsemen" and the Madison Badgers. The "spry little priests' name", he added, "is Fr. Vincent Catapang" and "he joined me in singing the Notre Dame Victory March while we bounced along toward a village far safer than the one he had left behind.

The Life of Mayor Roman L. Perez

Mayor Roman Lira Perez was known to be a man of profound character. Those who were able to know him would describe him as a man of very high principle, unending compassion, and great vision who had contributed a lot to the development of WPC as one of its founders.

Roman Perez served as the mayor of the then Municipality of Batangas during the time when the Western Philippine Colleges was founded. He was born on November 18, 1894, the eldest among the nine children of Francisco Perez (not the Francisco G. Perez as another UB founder), a court interpreter of some lawyers, and Anacleto Lira, a simple housewife, who managed the family's small business, the Kumintang Soft drinks, a small sari-sari store, and their small wine distillery.

Roman was a very simple person whose actions did not fit the position of a strong political leader. He received a very good character training and a family breeding that developed his great sense of responsibility. This was greatly manifested by the way he took care of his siblings. He learned from his parents the value of respect and love for one's family as well as the value of concern for others. His daughter, Belen, described her father as a very gentle person in the face of problems, which she attributed to the filial love and care that Roman acquired from his parents.

Aware of their financial situation, Roman worked at a very young age. He had to help his parents send his siblings-Juanita, Petronila, Juanito, Fortunata, Alberto, Juliana, Cornelio, and Eugenio-to school. The substantial number of siblings made him decide to stop schooling and helped his parents realize the dream of building a happy family of professionals. Later on, this dream was realized through the support and the great effort of Roman.

It took the people of Batangas a good Mayor to give them the courage and hope that they needed to live. In return, Mayor Perez did his best to protect his fellow Batangueños from the cruelty of the Japanese. For instance, the mayor involved himself in saving the whole town from the fire because as the Japanese soldiers were retreating during the period of Liberation, they were burning houses as they fled. Mayor Perez, the townspeople, and the firefighters followed behind in order to put out the fire.

During the Japanese Occupation, and even after the Liberation, Mayor Perez kept on telling the people to send their children to school and to find ways and means for their children to finish higher education. He believed in the power of education and he was trying to envision a community with the youth equipped with proper education and training. It was his great belief that opportunities would knock on the door of the lowly people only if they had been properly educated.

Inasmuch as everybody who wanted to finish their college education had to go to Manila to obtain their chosen degree, it became too difficult for the people of Batangas to let their children finish their college degrees because it would be too expensive to send these young people to Manila. In addition, parents would not gamble on sending their daughters to Manila for a college degree. Those who were financially capable allowed only their sons to go to Manila for a college education.

This was the primary reason why Roman's brothers were the only ones who were able to obtain college degrees. His brother, Juanito L. Perez became a dentist; Alberto L. Perez finished Bachelor of Science in Education and ended up as a high school teacher and, later on, auditor. Cornelio L. Perez became a pilot; while Eugenio L. Perez was able to obtain a degree in Commerce. With what his brothers had obtained, Roman used to give advice to his fellow Batangueños about the necessity of education. However, he was also aware that although his sisters never obtained a college degree, all of them still became responsible citizens and very successful in their chosen life.

During the term of Mayor Roman Perez, the Municipality of Batangas became very productive despite the Japanese invasion. There was peace and order and the people were living an almost very ordinary life. Mayor Perez organized livelihood programs for the people. One of the livelihood projects that he organized was the Kumersyo ng Bao. He also organized the Neighborhood Association to support the small business enterprises and to organize business relations with the nearby municipalities. He was able to organize entrepreneurial activities in the Municipality of Batangas because the Japanese were fond of theatre plays and cultural presentations. Mayor Roman Perez deemed it necessary to organize cultural activities so as to divert the attention of the Japanese from being too tyrannical and cruel. Mayor Perez asked the community residents to organize singing and dancing competitions, balagtasan, and sports activities like basketball, volleyball, and other native games. These activities diverted also the attention of the Batangas folks, thereby, preventing many of them from joining guerilla activities.

Aware of the fact that any guerilla activity would bring the Japanese to become more cruel to the whole populace, Mayor Roman did everything he could in order to make Batangas peaceful; although such acts led the other guerrillas to think that he was already taking sides with the Japanese. But all he wanted was to save the lives of the Filipino people from the hands of the Japanese invaders.

However, even if the other people would think that Mayor Roman had already sided with the Japanese, at least he was able to win the confidence of the Japanese because he was able to instill on the people of Batangas the three major points of the Japanese government: cleanliness, honesty, and courtesy. Hence, during the term of Mayor Perez, the Municipality of Batangas was always spared from Japanese atrocities. Because there was peace in Batangas even during the time of war, churches were opened and religious activities were tolerated even up to the point that some Japanese also attended religious rites. However, in truth, the Japanese were only joining religious rites in order to properly observe the people.

The Japanese would really want to educate the Filipino people in order to make them develop a philosophical ideology that "Asia is.

The Legacy of Mayor Roman Perez

Mayor Roman Perez was primarily a politician before he was an educator. But unlike any other modern-day politicians, his leadership was an epitome of honesty and integrity. He never enriched himself with material things. During those times, his being a friend of the Japanese could have made himself and his family well-off. But he remained true to his being a Filipino.

As a Mayor, he was a true servant of the town of Batangas. He was always in a place where he was needed by the people. He was always willing to help the needy whether they were friends or not. It was for this reason that the people of Batangas started to appreciate and love him. This was the reason why he easily won the mayoralty race in the election after World War II. Third from left, Mayor Roman Perez initiated the establishment of the Batangas Puericulture Center, a proof that he also cared for mothers.

Rarely we can find politicians whose concern for education are as great as that of Mayor Roman Perez. Although he did not finish a college degree, it did not become a hindrance to his great love for education. However, education for him should not only be for the purpose of gaining knowledge but for the students to realize their respective duties and responsibilities as a nation-builder. The life of Mayor Roman Perez is an epitome of the philosophy of Indira Gandhi. Gandhi's philosophy is embodied in this quotation: Be mindful of the things that will destroy us: Wealth without work. Pleasure without conscience. Knowledge without character. Commerce without morality. Science without humanity. Worship without sacrifice. Politics without principle.

Mayor Perez wanted the people to learn to develop the proper values that will make everyone a human person. He wanted everyone to develop a sense of hard work. He believed that this is the only way by which people would be able to recover from the ravages of war. He believed that it is just normal to aspire for wealth. But he would always remind everyone to remain to be a moral person. Mayor Perez lived a life of the character. He set an example as to how to live a humanistic life. He remained to be a high-principled man. His great sacrifices for his people became his own legacy. His own story became his own contribution not only to the people of Batangas but also to WPC.

The Life of Atty. Francisco G. Perez

Atty. Francisco G. Perez was a well-known politician of the 1950s. Kiko, as he was fondly called by his friends, was a true-blooded Batangueño whose roots could be traced in the barrio (now barangay) of Mahakot in Batangas and in the town of Ibaan, Batangas. He was born on April 1, 1900, by humble barrio parents who tilled the soil and planted food crops for subsistence. For this matter, the young Kiko experienced the difficult barrio life that was devoid of the luxuries of material life.

The experience of difficulty did not weaken his spirit. In fact, it even inspired him to develop the values of frugality, industry, patience, perseverance, strong will-power, diligence, and a great love for education.

Francisco Perez was a self-made man, who took the long hard road to be a successful professional. Even at an early age, he strived to learn diligently. With the aid of his photographic memory, it became easy for him to complete his basic education in his barrio and, later on, at the Batangas High School for his secondary course.

Just like most of the students during that time who were dreaming of obtaining higher degrees in education, Kiko also went to Manila to obtain a degree. As a law student, he patiently copied the law books manually, word for word because he could not buy a book out of financial constraints. The books at that time were costly. But because of his strong desire to become a lawyer, he did the best he could do in order to realize his dream. Out of his passion for education and his determination, he was able to finish his law course and even graduated valedictorian. He took the Bar examinations afterward and he was able to successfully pass. In this regard, he became the first professional of the barrio of Mahakot.

According to Dr. Lorelie Evangeline M. Perez-Miranda, the granddaughter of Atty. Francisco, her grandmother, Conrada Benito-Perez, the wife of Atty. Francisco told her that he was capable of memorizing books to the letter. His photographic had paid off because he was able to rank first after the completion of the course in college and in his law degree.

Atty. Francisco was a man of firm determination. Although a neophyte in the field of politics, he dropped his hat in the political arena as a candidate to fill in one of the two board member slots of the second district of Batangas. He easily won in the clean election and since then, he became popular as a political-legal luminary.

Bokal Francisco Perez authored ordinances and resolutions that were beneficial to the people of the Second District of Batangas. He also participated actively in board deliberations especially those that are related to education. His resonant voice always echoed in the sessions which he never faltered to attend because he was always being reminded by his conscience of his duty as a politician and as a servant of the community.

Because of his concern for the people and his great love and dedication to his job, he was elected again and again until he won the seat for the fifth time as a Provincial Board Member. This was actually one of the rarest episodes that will be written in the history of Batangas province. An unknown lawyer from the barrio of Mahakot, whose name did not ring a bell, was elected for five consecutive terms in a free political exercise seeking the votes of his constituents. Yet, they gave him their votes of confidence by casting the ballot in favor of Atty. Francisco. This single act spoke of his unwavering and growing popularity as well as his closeness to the people of Batangas. The people reciprocated him for his stint as a respected and honored provincial leader.

Regarding his love for education, his son, Dr. Hernando B. Perez (now the president of the University of Batangas), made a remark that his father was so obsessed with the academe. This obsession became the essential reason that led to the founding of the Western Philippine Colleges in 1946. It was the intense desire of the founders to make the WPC grow to its full potentials. As a co-founder, Atty. Kiko campaigned for more enrollees and assiduously worked in the opening of the College of Law. He was the first treasurer and dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Law on a concurrent capacity. As he was the dean of the College of Liberal Arts and the College of Law, Atty. Francisco also acted as the Treasurer of WPC. Hence, he was the center of action in solving the problems of accommodation and the financing of the Western Philippine Colleges as the enrollment was increasing year after year. The priority of having a lot and school building was thrown to Bokal Kiko inasmuch as brilliant minds spotted the vacant lot behind the old provincial Ayuntamiento structure.

Because he was the Board Member, he was tasked to negotiate in behalf of the WPC Board of Directors the lease of the lot on M. H. Del Pilar Street (now the UB Elementary Department). Being a noted politician with an untarnished character, he was able to have the lot leased to the Western Philippine Colleges for a period of 99 years at the rate of P1.00 per year.

This action marked the beginning of the rise and the growth of the college. The initial construction was a two-storey building for the College of Liberal Arts, Education, Junior Normal, Commerce, and Law, A one-storey structure was also built to house the high school students. It should be noted that the school's enrolment increased every year which necessitated the addition of a two-storey building and another two-storey edifice between the two buildings. Bokal Perez played a pivotal role in the construction of all buildings located on the Main college campus.

Regarding frugality and thriftiness, another granddaughter, Dr. Abegayle Machel Perez-Chua, the present Vice President for Academic Affairs of the University of Batangas, learned from her grandmother, who was fondly called Mama by the grandchildren, that Bokal Perez, as the school's Treasurer, was very frugal with the purchase and use of construction materials to the extent of counting and picking up nails on the ground during the time of construction. Dr. Hernando Perez, the son of Atty. Francisco would remember his father as very strict who was cautious about school attendance to the extent of frequently sending his mother to monitor his schedule and school achievement. He was also a disciplinarian, who did not spare the rod.

Dr. Perez recalled that one time, he knew very well that he would be punished due to a sin he committed. He knew that he would be hit by a stick and so, he covered his behind with a notebook under his pants. Atty. Francisco used his belt to punish his son. However, it produced a different sound. When Bokal Perez discovered what the son did, he laughed. At times, he would make his children who committed mistakes to kneel on a bilao of mongo beans.

Although he was very strict, he was nevertheless an affectionate father who used to shower his children with tender loving care by giving them personal attention whenever they were sick. He would usually stay up late at night just to make sure that his sick child would be okay. His fondness for children was probably the reason why he was able to dedicate his life to the promotion of education in the whole province of Batangas.

Atty. Francisco Perez was extremely concerned about the pursuit of learning. In fact, he used to encourage his barrio mates to send their children to school based on the premise that education is the best legacy that parents could leave to their children. As an incentive to the less fortunate relatives, he offered them free board and lodging in his own house so that these poor youngsters could avail of high school and college education. There were even occasions when he would help them with their tuition fees and miscellaneous expenses because he wanted them to have access to learning. Bokal Kiko kept on inspiring people to study for he believed that poverty is not a deterrent to success. He believed that a very productive life and a bright future could be attained through education, with himself as the best example.

Miss Belen Perez, a former student of Bokal Perez, knew her teacher as a man of principles. She remembered that Bokal Perez was a tenacious and highly-opinionated being who often argued and defended his points of arguments. He wanted to put across his ideas in a persistent and insistent manner until the issue was won. For this matter, conflicts often ensued between him and the other founders like Fr. Catapang and Mr. Javier. However, as good friends, they easily patched up differences before the end of the day's last office hours.

Bokal Perez was also identified as the man who always walked with bowed head and eyes focused on the ground. His friends in jest often asked him what he was looking for to which he gamely retorted that he was in search of gold.

Like any other human beings, there were times when he quickly lost his temper and would flare up like a volcano. However, he would easily get over with his temperamental outburst and would Atty. Francisco G. Perez and his wife, return to his normal self within a Conrada Benito-Perez. short period of time.

Despite his being temperamental, he was generous as a family head. He was also very much concerned with the health and education of his constituents. According to his granddaughter, Dr. Loralie Miranda, Bokal Perez had a very strong desire to put a private hospital in addition to the existing Batangas Provincial Hospital. Dr. Miranda mentioned that St. Patrick's Hospital was actually the idea of Atty. Francisco Perez. It was for this reason that he sent his eldest son Abelardo to the New York Polyclinic Medical Center in the United States of America for specialization as an EENT physician. Upon the return of Dr. Abelardo, they would lay the plan for the construction of the hospital at a designated spot in their family-owned parcel of land.

However, fate was unkind to both of them. While Dr. Abelardo was on training in New York, in the morning of August 29, 1959, while he was about to prepare to hear mass, Bokal Perez complained of stomach pains. Such pain was found out to be a symptom of cardiac arrest which led to the death of Bokal Francisco Perez. He was at his prime age of 59.

According to Dr. Lorelie Miranda, the night before it happened, Atty. Francisco was very happy and very much excited because he was just appointed by the President of the Philippines, Elpidio Quirino as Judge. And he was telling his wife, Conrada, that at least, they would have another source of income, which was an indication that he was a very honest politician who did not take advantage of his position in order to enrich himself and his family.

Mrs. Flordeliza Arguelles commented on the demise of a comrade in the educational field lifted from her files. She wrote: Halfway in the completion of the last building, very early in the morning, we were shocked by the grim news that our Treasurer and College of Law Dean passed away, a victim of cardiac arrest. Atty. Perez was among the dedicated leaders of Western Philippine Colleges, a champion of integrity and progress. Although a very well-known politician, he did not involve the college in politics. Indeed, he left a void which is hard to fill.

Dr. Aurora M. Babasa, during her stay at the Batangas Heritage Center office, wrote in her description of Atty. Francisco Perez, that she had the rare opportunity of gaining the acquaintanceship and the chance of rubbing elbows with the founders of WPC especially Atty. Perez, Mr. Javier, and Fr. Catapang. Her description of Bokal Perez was that he was an epitome of dedicated service and strong leadership. Her description of Bokal Perez was that he was:

- A lover of pets especially rabbits and pigeons; • A stern loving family patriarch, who exercised strong parental authority;
- A disciplinarian who used the rod and the belt in disciplining his children; • A man with a serious mind who advocated positive values among his children;
- A stalwart in the field of politics who was a staunch defender and supporter of principles; • An educator who was known to be a lover of wisdom and knowledge;
- A generous friend who shared his talents and resources with the needy and less fortunate beings;
- A deep-rooted Christian who strictly adhered to the doctrines of the faith; and above all,
- A co-founder of the WPC and a key player in the growth and transformation that the college had undergone.

Dr. Aurora M. Babasa believed that his name will be etched in the memorabilia of the institution he helped to build.

The Legacy of Atty. Francisco Perez Atty. Francisco G. Perez had gone to his final resting place but his memory will forever be cherished by those he left behind. As long as the monument to his fame and glory stands proud and tall, his name will be remembered as one of the six noble founders of the Western Philippine Colleges, now the University of Batangas. Atty. Perez was known to be a man of principles. His voice will resonate in the four corners of a room whenever he would try to persuade the others in order to prove a point. He was never afraid to fight for what he knew was right even up to the point of being beaten by the Japanese when the Japanese prevented the people from passing through a Japanese sentry somewhere in the Hilltop area. Atty. Perez fought for his principle and demanded to the Japanese that he be allowed to pass through because according to him, why would he be prevented from passing through a territory that was owned by the Filipinos.

Just like the other founders, Atty. Perez was also pragmatic. He did not fight a Japanese when he encountered one and he could have won the fight but he did not do that because during that time, his eldest son, Dr. Abelardo, was with him and he did not want something bad to happen to his family. He could easily sacrifice himself just for the sake of his loved ones: his family, his constituents, and the Western Philippine Colleges.

Bokal Perez's pragmatic principle was shown in the way he set his goals for himself, for his children, and for the institutions that he was connected with. As he was pushing the people of Brgy.

Mahakor to send their children to school to finish a degree, he set himself as a perfect example of hard work and determination that could lead to success. And in order to be of a better example, he made it sure that

Other Personalities behind the Success of the University of Batangas

The visions set by the founders became the guiding principle of the other people who took part in the development of the University of Batangas. No one can deny the fact that the founders were able to plant a good seed. However, such seed would not grow without the great contributions of the following personalities who took devoted also their life for the growth and development of the then Western Philippine Colleges, now the University of Batangas.

Because of the great dedication of the founders for the WPC, those who had been part of the institution realized that the works of these founders should not be put into waste. The people around the founders believed that the institution that they established would definitely be capable of providing better hope not only to the people of Batangas but to the Filipino people as a whole. And the ones who believed them greatly were the people closest to their hearts.

The Women Behind the Success of WPC An old adage says: "Behind the success of a man, there is always a woman behind." When the founders planted the seed of WPC, there was a need for somebody who would water this seed and who would take care of the said seed in order to make it grow. These were the roles of the women who also devoted their life for WPC.

Atty. Pablo Umali died on August 15, 1982, at the age of 72.

The Legacy of Atty. Pablo C. Umali

From the outsiders' perspective, Atty. Umali could not have left a great legacy in UB because of his early retirement from the service as Member of the Board and as the Dean of the College of Commerce of WPC. But what he left was his legacy of honesty and his great concern for the education of the youth. His life was actually a manifestation of what is written in Proverbs 28, 6: "Better is a poor man who walks in his integrity than a rich man who is crooked in his ways."

According to the grandson of Atty. Pablo Umali, Mr. Joel Umali Peña, his grandfather hated graft and corruption so much. His concern for the City of Lipa made him accept the position as the City Assessor in order to see to it that graft and corruption would be prevented and, if possible, totally eradicated.

As Dean of the College of Commerce, he was promoting honesty and integrity in the field of business. He knew for a fact that these students would be working as business managers or accountants. They have to be taught to uphold their dignity and they should not be involved in any forms of graft and corruption. Because of the seed that he planted to the students of WPC, the institution had been known to have produced honest accountants and good businessmen. It had somehow made the students learn that character is more important than wealth. His short stay in WPC had created also a legacy especially in the College of Commerce because of the values that he imbibed among the faculty and students.

because of the family's financial situation, he was still able to obtain his Law Degree from the University of Manila and was able to pass the Bar Examination afterward. Atty. Umali was an educator. He worked as a teacher in the College of Law in the Lipa City Colleges. He had also set a name in the field of law that earned him a position as a Municipal Judge in San Luis, Batangas, Later on, he became the City Assessor in Lipa City until his retirement.

Atty. Pablo was married to Consuelo Templo, who was a school supervisor. His decision to join the group in founding a school was because he understood the obstacles in the educational system as well as the problems and difficulties of the students who were coming from poor families. Hence, when he received the invitation from Fr. Catapang to be part of the establishment of WPC, he did not have second thoughts.

Pablo and Consuelo were gifted with three children: Fely Librea, a pharmacist; Norma Peña, a medical doctor; and Pablo Umali, Jr., an engineer. Atty. Umali was so concerned about the education of his children and made it a point that they would be able to become professionals. And so, they did. His concern for the family was so great that he would make it a point to spend quality time with his wife and children at their 2-hectare land planted with citrus fruits.

Aside from being a lawyer, he was also a columnist at Free Press and Panorama during the 60's. He was also writing for Senator Claro M. Recto. This was a clear indication that Atty. Umali had a brilliant mind. This brilliance was transformed into a great concern for the society. As a writer, he had to be reflective and had to be very much aware of what is happening in the country both politically, morally, and economically. He had to be critical in the different issues so that the concerned persons and offices in the government and in the private sectors could become aware of the state of affairs of the country.

According to his kins, Atty. Umali was gifted with artistic hands, He was also said to be a painter. His talent in painting had brought him to become friends with famous Filipino artists. It was said that he even became a known model in the painting of the National Artist Vicente Silva Manansala.
